

Understanding Global Banking & Markets

Global Banking & Markets business line has many different product teams and relationship management teams who work for multinational corporates, financial institutions as well as government institutions in cash management, foreign exchange, trade and financing, as well as capital raising in the public market.

Markets & Security services works alongside Global Banking in the sense that we're able to unite clients and offer them a range of different services.

We are able to deal with clients who are looking for sales or trading and we deal with the post trade services relating to this.

So in Global Research, whilst a big part of our job is servicing external clients, our research is also used and read internally by Global Banking & Markets.

Global Liquidity and Cash Management is one of the essential parts of Global Banking because it allows companies to make payments and receive payments from all over the world.

We use artificial intelligence to solve problems. And it is really this problem-solving aspect of the job, but still trying to fulfil a real purpose for our clients that I really enjoy.

What appealed to me most about this area of business was the fast-paced work environment and also the collaboration with my team-mates.

Investment Banking, on a day-to-day basis, is very challenging and intellectually stimulating. And so here you get the sense of ownership and responsibility that you cannot get anywhere else.
